Dear Minister Pavey,

RE: article in the SMH (June 14) titled F6 Extension to mean bulldozing homes or cutting through the national park by Peter Martin

We are unsure of the merits or truth of the article but would like to stress that a choice between saving housing or saving parts of the world's second oldest National Park should be avoided, particularly at the early planning stages of projects. It also puts considerable pressure on residents and their responsibility in terms of the National Park.

Sydney's value and status as a global city relies on its unique landscape and natural assets. We believe that with sensitive design and planning there would be a range of options that could benefit residents and our world renowned natural heritage.

Landscape architects are the profession who can help in this project and we have a long history of eminent designers who have helped the government plan and design its road infrastructure.

We are ready to assist in this project or any others and welcome the opportunity to meet with you on this matter and discuss further

Yours Sincerely

Julie Lee
